

ADEA Emerging Leaders Program

Description and Overview (From the ADEA website)

The ADEA Emerging Leaders Program is a three-and-a-half-day program that covers topics such as leadership styles, team building and time management, which are essential to planning and implementing a successful academic career. This highly interactive program has been designed specifically to give faculty guidance, insight and skills to propel their careers, and is suited for early career faculty members, whether they recently joined their institutions after a residency or after time spent in private practice. The programming includes onsite sessions led by preeminent experts in dental education, readings, assignments and team-building exercises. Additionally, each participant is assigned to a peer group tasked with helping its members implement the topics discussed and learn to manage the pressures of being a new faculty member. These peer groups are facilitated by leaders in dental education, who themselves are graduates of the ADEA Emerging Leaders Program or the ADEA Leadership Institute. The program takes place in Washington DC in July.

Eligibility

Early Career Faculty (up to three years of academic career experience)

Be an ADEA member

Be a full-time or part-time faculty

To be considered for full financial support by Dean's office, the SDM faculty should discuss this opportunity with their Division Chairs and submit a CV and statement of purpose briefly describing their career path and actions they are taking to follow it. Faculty should also indicate what they intend to achieve in this program and what steps they have taken to learn about leadership and academic management. This information will also be requested by ADEA during registration. A Faculty Development Advisory Committee, Chaired by the Associate Dean of Faculty Affairs, will review candidates and make recommendations to the Dean for sponsorship. Materials should be submitted no later than May 15 each year, to Ms Darlene Gugliotti in the Office of Faculty Affairs via e-mail (gugliotti@uchc.edu).